“WHEREAS, the Catholic Church in its certain inclusiveness, holding together a communities of traits or ideas which need not and should not be separated because they are rooted in one and the same apostolic faith, that also implies that diversity is not only to be tolerated but to be welcomed as a gift of God’s abundant goodness;

“WHEREAS, religious institutions are important in the life of our nation as they play a major role in the proper moral formation of the people, espousing doctrines which are complementary to the principles of responsible citizenship, in the light of our modern world we live in, religious institutions become more relevant as believers focus on the essence of spirituality and higher purpose of life;

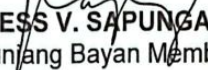

"WHEREAS, the esteemed success being reaped of by these newly ordained priests of Oriental Mindoro is built to a great extent by the strength of their religious conviction to become holy leaders and fortified by all challenges which have been jointly and ably weathered by its clergy and its faithful for the time being they spent to study and to serve the community;

"WHEREAS, this manifestation reflects the humanity is in need of a God who is merciful and provident, who will bring people together and raise awareness to their vocation to be brothers and sisters to one another, that this church and its people has humanized social and political structures, giving life to the tradition of humanitarian and educational works; Now, therefore, be it...
